about Xcellence Community Magazine

Xcellence Community Magazine meets the goal and strategic plan of Xcellence, Inc. to promote leaders. Marketing continues to be a challenging effort for leaders, small businesses, entrepreneurs, ministries, and communities.

The magazine launched in 2013 with its first issue honoring women of the community. Since then the magazine has highlighted some of the most influential leaders around the globe. The magazine is accredited for the late Mr. Tommy Ford from the Martin Lawrence Show as his last interview before his sudden and unexpected death. The magazine also interviewed the late Dr. Edith Mitchell, one the country's top cancer doctors, researchers, and advocates for equity in health.

We pride ourselves in sharing the lives of leaders around the globe who are making an impact within their area of expertise as we as within their local communities.

about Xcellence Publishing House

Xcellence Publishing House formerly known as Alpha Publishing is Xcellence, Inc.'s newest venture. The affiliated entity works with our members and leaders abroad to tell, share, educate, and inspire others through their words and their works. In the words of the late, Dr. Myles Munroe, "Everybody has at least one book inside of them and that is the book of their life." We facilitate that process for those who desire to leave a legacy through their words and their book(s).

Xcellence Publishing House has assisted several first-time authors, and serial authors turn their words into masterpieces that they can be proud of for years to come. In addition, publishing your thoughts, expressions, and experiences is therapeutic to both the author and the reader. In Habakkuk 2:2 KJV, it reads, "Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it."
